“ Jim McCullagh was very kind and friendly. I first met him in the UNI campus student union at lunchtime, in passing, about 20 years ago. We chatted many times through the years, mostly seeing each other by chance around campus. I worked in the reference department in Rod Library, and he sometimes consulted with me and other librarians when looking for resources to support his research. Finally, about 4-5 years ago I visited his office. I retired in 2018, and hadn't seen Jim in a while. He was also my friend on Facebook. He was a kind and intelligent man, dedicated to his students and his research. He was also my friend on campus. I will miss him, knowing that he is no longer in the world. I'm happy to know that he has been reunited with his beloved wife.

“ I work as an Educational Technologist at UNI. I met Jim a number of years ago when he reached out to our department, wanting to learn how to put some of his class materials online. He was doing this because of his dedication to his students. Students had told him they would like to be able to get access to materials on our learning management system. I was the one that supported him with these efforts from then on.

I really came to enjoy scheduled support sessions with Jim. I always went to his office for these. In most instances, people came to my office. But I realized it would help him a lot if he could work on his own computer in his own environment. I've always admired seniors who take on technology, as it can be so overwhelming for those who didn't grow up with it. And our learning management system has a lot going on in it. So we worked together as often as needed for him to take on whatever new piece of the system he wanted to start to use and he got to where he could do quite a bit of it on his own.

When we would go for longer periods of time without a support session, I was always happy to bump into him on campus to chat for a bit. I often walked by his office door on my way from the parking garage to my building, as going through his building was a shortcut to my building. If I saw the light on in his office and I had time, I would occasionally stop and knock on the door.

He was a really, great guy and he had become a friend. I've missed seeing him since COVID and his retirement and will miss him. I work remotely still, but when I do walk past Jim's office door (and it will always be JIM'S office door to me), I will think of fond memories of our long conversations about his students, his travels, my travels, his family, my family, ping pong and so much more.

Goodbye, Jim. May you rest in peace alongside your beloved wife in a location I know was very dear to your heart. Who knows, maybe one day, I'll find your resting place. As you know, I have Irish in my blood too, and I've always wanted to visit Ireland.

“ Dr. McCullagh was one of my favorite people and such a joy to work with in creating curriculum applicable for public social work. Jim and I would often spend hours on the phone bouncing ideas off of each other. Some of the ideas actually ended up in courses for DHS workers and for UNI students. He was always so positive and supportive. He will be missed.

“ J.J. Your parents were a positive influence on so many lives. I continue to remember fondly and with respect their friendship, from years of working with Cheryl. There were so many stories of Ireland, the cats, and, of course, how proud they were of you.

“ So many students will be heartbroken upon hearing of the death of one of their favorite professors, one who had gotten to know them personally through his teaching of the social work practice courses. As his colleague and friend, I can say Jim always put his students first and pressured faculty to do the same. I feel his loss deeply. I want to mention he had set up a scholarship for social work students in his beloved mother's name--Anna McCullagh--and I believe he will love contributions to this fund more than anything (at the UNI.foundation.org).

“ Dr. McCullagh taught me so so much not only about social work but also what it means to be a great person. I will always treasure our conversations and the knowledge he provided me about the Cherokee people. A truly amazing man who has left a legacy and mark on the entire UNI community. Rest easy.

“ I met Dr. McCullagh In 1983. I had just served four years in the US Marine Corps. I was very uncertain what I wanted to do with my life. I was accepted to UNI but under academic probation. My first semester my courses were chosen for me. I was allowed to take a personal fitness course, a career decision making class, and an intro to social work class. My very first class on my very first day of college I met Dr. Jim. His words inspired me to become a social work major, go to grad school and become a social worker. I feel very lucky to have had him be part of my life. I would not have become the social worker or man I am without Dr. Jim . What an amazing life he led. Dr. Jim you will continue to inspire me. Thank you so much.

“ Jim noticed me on my worst days & handed me packets of graduate schools on the east coast for me to consider (ha). He took time to process with me how community really really really really matters to me — which was a profound realization for me as a junior in college. Jim randomly showed up at Nazareth on a Wednesday to eat supper together and generously donated towards our mission trip to Jamaica. I’ll miss his presence & smile at Panera — real thankful to be known by Jim!

“ To Dr. McCullagh’s family: my deepest condolences on the loss of such a kind man.

One of my favorite memories was the Thanksgiving he and his son joined a small dinner at St. Stephen the Witness. So much joy and laughter was had. He and all the gentlemen present led the charge against the dishes and never has such a chore been done with such fun.

His volunteerism was commendable. He taught me so much about how to properly sacristan for Mass. He took pride in doing even the little tasks well. I enjoyed hearing about his life while drying Mass vessels. Often the last two people locking up the church after services.

His generosity was also often quietly financial. Supporting many social justice projects giving our students resources to start making a difference themselves. Always humble when thanked he truly was led by his faith.

I appreciated his leadership, mentorship, and most of all friendship. Always with a gentle listening ear, he advised and comforted. I truly enjoyed our conversations. I respected his very strong work ethic and dedication to a job well done. Jim was a wealth of knowledge and he put it to use in his quest to make a difference. He put his generous spirit into action. We are all the better for it!
