“ You were the little Sister God blessed me with when you met my brother. You're the sister I will never get over losing. My life was changed for the better when you became part of it and has now been forever changed again ... but not for the better. I feel the loss of you deep in my soul. I light this candle for you dear sister... for the light you brought to me and the world. I'm sure it's fairly dim compared to your Heavenly glow. I love you forever Jenni.

“ Jen (aka my Cous), the most beautiful human I have had the honor to call [unbiological] family, came into my life over 20 years ago. It was heartache that brought us together and it is heartache that separates us until we meet again on the Rainbow Bridge.

Cous and I met when I was 14 at my cousin Danny's funeral. It was the greatest blessing to have her and her beautiful daughter join our family. Jen was ALWAYS—ALWAYS there for me when I needed someone the most and it is my wishes I made even the smallest effort to repay her.

Cous wasn't just a cousin, but the most amazing "big sister" I never had. My heart feels so torn in half as I know she wants us to celebrate her new chapter of traveling the stars, but whom she left here in this life will remain voided in their hearts for the mother, wife, sister, best friend she was to us all.

Cous— I freaking LOVE YOU more than you'll ever know. I will love my life as a better human because You were in it—not that you had to be, but because You actually wanted to be in my life!!! Thank you for all the life gifts you have given me. I love You so very, very much, Cous!!!!!!

Love forever & eternally,
YOUR Cous.
