“ We were the three musketeers having coffee; Wendell, Roger and I. I can't remember who stated it, but it was a fun to meet up at Panara. We would yammer about anything and end the conversation with that "indefiant attedant five cylindar kind of word" that Roy called it. Things became different after Roger died with the weekly coffee get together. Wendell took up the cause for going out with people who weren't in a relationship. He would say, "I like to get together with people." He was a chum who will be missed.
